AN ATTEMPT TO RAISE THE DEAD THAT NEVER LIVED.

Dr. Starr Claims That He Never Owed the Government a Cent in His Life. In 1879, certain mall contracts were let to one C. C. Frayer, of Washington. On these Dr. William M. Starr and Mr. Mason were suretles. Owing to some irregularity in the letting of the contracts, Dr. Starr sugnested to the government that for its safety and that of the suretles, the government was the third contracts, the government of the contracts of the c safety and that of the sureties, the government pay to the sub-contractor directly the sums due them and then to Mr. Frayer, the amount remaining for him.

Postmaster General Keys, under the Hayes administration, accepted the proposition and pronounced it a wise plan of procedure. The contracts were executed under this new agreement. A question was raised at the time as to the effect of this plan upon the sureties. Mr. Keys affirmed that the sureties were released in as much as the government had in its own power the means of preventing anyloss toitself. Mr. Frayser remained in the business during the whole four years, or until the contracts were all settled, and reject to other parties. After this, Frayser was also released by the government, which appears in the government records.

ment records.

A year or two after that time Mr.

Prayeer died. Two years subsequent to his death, judgment by default was taken against Starr and Mason on the old contract against Starr and Mason on the old contract which was cancelled when the new one was made. The first intimation that Starr and Mason had of any suit or any action whatever in the matter was received by Starr on Saturday evening, April 27, 1895, when he was notified by the marshal that if he did not pay off a judgment against him for several thousand dollars by noon of the following Monday his property in the city of Wasnington would be seized and soid on the Monsay following, at 120 clock. He repaired to the marshal and asked a little breathing time to recover from the shock of such an unexpected and confessedly irregular and unwarranted proceeding. A stay until the succeeding Weinesday was obtained.

The case is still in court at this date,

STOVE IN THEIR YACHT.

Spanish Warship. New York, Sept. 9.—When the Ward line teamer Santiago arrived at this port about two weeks ago, she reported a strange incident, which was only made known this morning. On the first day out from Havana, while steaming along the Cuban coast, the lookup sighted the hull of what seemed to be a small craft hauled up on a stretch of sandy beach. sandy beach.

The rigging and spars of the vessel were gone and a great hole had been knocked in her portquarter. The hatchway, combings, and cabin lights had disappeared and the vessel looked a total wreck. The damage erned to have been done by men, rather than by the sea. The wrecked vessel left pier No. 10, North River, a little over three weeks ago, in charge of Capt. Sam. Elliot. She was chartered by the Cuban rebels to convey arms and ammunition to the patriots.

In the hold of the vessel were stored 500
Winchester rifles and cartridges, and 500 pounds of dynamic fuse by the American Dynamite Company, and large quantities of provisions and medicines for field

use.

The crew was made of twenty wealthy young Cubans, all sons of Cuban merchants in the United States.

After an uneventful voyage the Cuban coast was sighted one evening just at twinght. Simultaneously the smoke of a steam-ship was seen upon the horizon. The yacht was anchored in a small cove marked upon the chart as a coast rendervotant the care.

the chart as a coast rendezvous and the cargo quickly taken ashore.

The following morning the yacht stood out to sea. A steamer was sighted. It was evidently the same whose smoke had been seen the night before, and it was discovered that she was a Spanish cruber. To more that she was a Spanish emiser. To run out to sea meant inevitable capture, so they knocked a hole in her port quarter and to-taily destroyed her upper works. Then they struck injand, where they found shelter. Two of their number left Cuba last week, reaching Key West Saturday. Their com-panions will follow them by circuitous

DEATH IN A MUD PUDDLE

Fifteen-Year-Old Lad Strangely

Drowned in Philadelphia. Philadelphia, Sept. 9 .- While a party of picknickers were proceeding homeward last night, in the southern section of the city, their wagon was driven into a ditch and one of the occupants, Christopher Hoffman, aged fifteen years, fell beneath the horse and was either drowned or suffocated in the mud. The vehicle, which contained the Hoffman family and several others, was being driven by Joseph Reiter, and when a dark road was reached the driver became confused and the wagon was overturned into a ditch. None of the others were hurt.

San Jose, Cal., Sept. 9 -At 12:30 o'clock this morning fire started in the large planing mill of the Santa Clara Valley Planing and Lumber Company, and in an hour the structsmoking ruins. The toss on the mill and lumber was $150,000; insurance, about $70,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.
